Epocrates offers Medical Apps

reVOLT Dual Charger

Scosche debuts reVOLT dual-12W car charger

November 12, 2013 | iPod Accessories, iPad Accessories, iPhone Accessories

Scosche has released its reVOLT ($25), a car charger with two USB 12W ports. While it's exceptionally similar to earlier reVOLT models, both ports now charge at 2.4A, allowing for full simultaneous iPad charging regardless of the iPad model.

Scosche notes that charging circuitry in reVOLT is designed for iOS — though the charger will work with most non-iOS smartphones and tablets, those devices may not charge at the fastest rates. Notably, Apple appears to have ended 2.4A/12W regarding speeds with the release of the iPad Air; only prior-generation full-sized iPads benefitted from the faster standard. The new reVOLT is available now.

Guided Access

Guided Access helps people with autism or other attention and sensory challenges stay focused on the task (or app) at hand. With Guided Access, a parent, teacher, or therapist can limit an iOS device to stay on one app by disabling the Home button, and even restrict touch input on certain areas of the screen. So wandering taps and gestures won't distract from learning.

December 15, 2012

The creation and widespread use of the iPhone has impacted many industries, and now has affected Medicine profoundly, and in many ways. In many cases the iPhone empowers and enhances the power of the device to which it is attached by its optic or computing power.

(See these Top Ten in VIDEO, at the DocVid Video Classroom)

We will examine the Top Ten Medical Uses that we feel has, and will have, a deep, continuing impact on the practice of healthcare.
