iPhone Sales Are Going Nuclear (AAPL)

BUSINESS INSIDER

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 19, 2014 2:32 PM GMT

A note from analysts at Morgan Stanley estimates Apple could sell up to 70 million iPhones this quarter.

If the average selling price of the iPhone is $605, then that would be $42.3 billion in revenue.

That's up from Morgan Stanley's initial estimate that Apple would sell 62 million iPhones. Morgan Stanley is tracking iPhone demand using web search analysis.

It's going to be a monster quarter for the iPhone between the first full quarter the iPhone 6 and iPhone 6 Plus were available and holiday sales. Apple has already said the iPhone 6 and 6 Plus is the most successful launch ever.

This isn't the first time we've heard about Apple's record quarter. UBS also predicted Apple will sell about 70 million iPhones.

Apple sold 51 million iPhone in the year-ago holiday quarter.

Morgan Stanley's note also says growth in China, one of the most important markets for the iPhone, is tracking 3x

Nobody plans to get sick, but nabbing a doctor's appointment on short notice is nearly impossible. Many people end up languishing in the Emergency Room or Urgent Care, only to be told at the end of their costly visit that they have the flu. Wouldn't it be great if you could just open an app on your phone, video chat with a doctor, and get your prescription without ever leaving your bed? Well, now you can with Doctor on Demand.

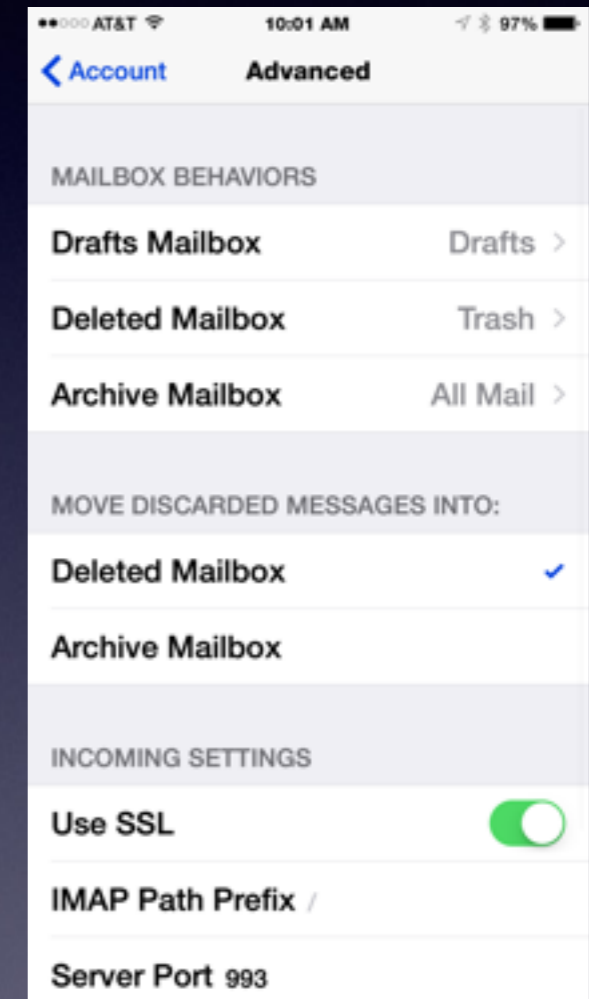

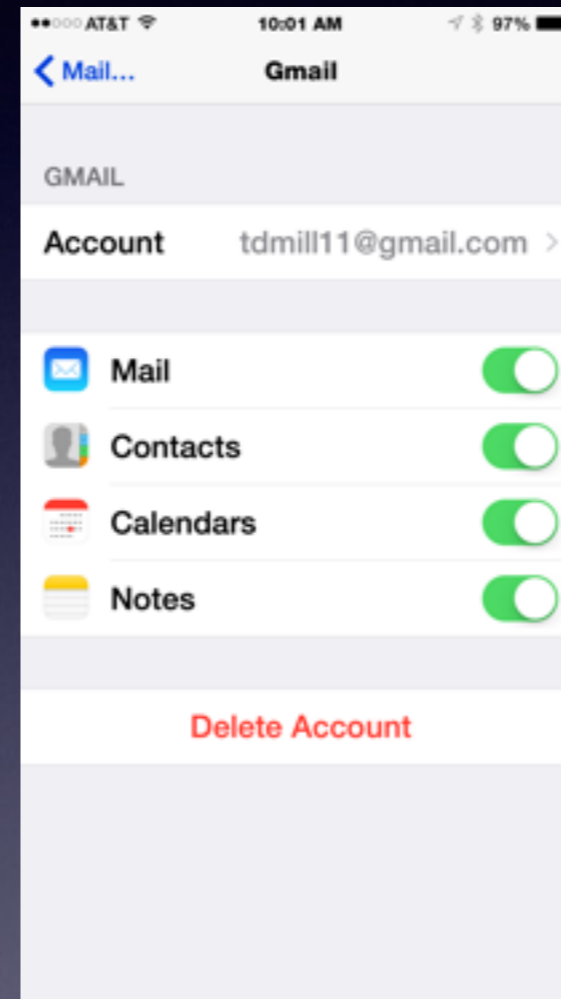

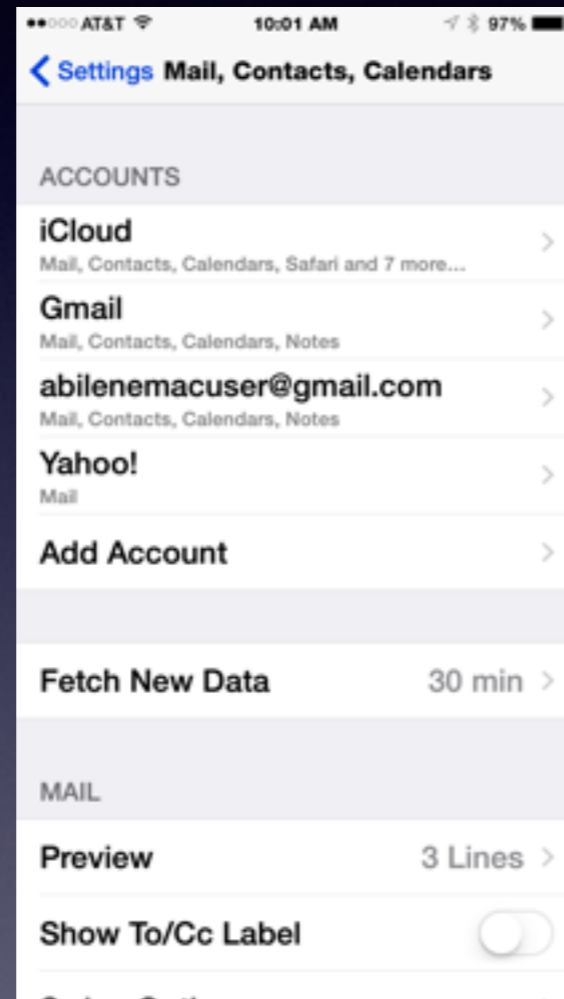

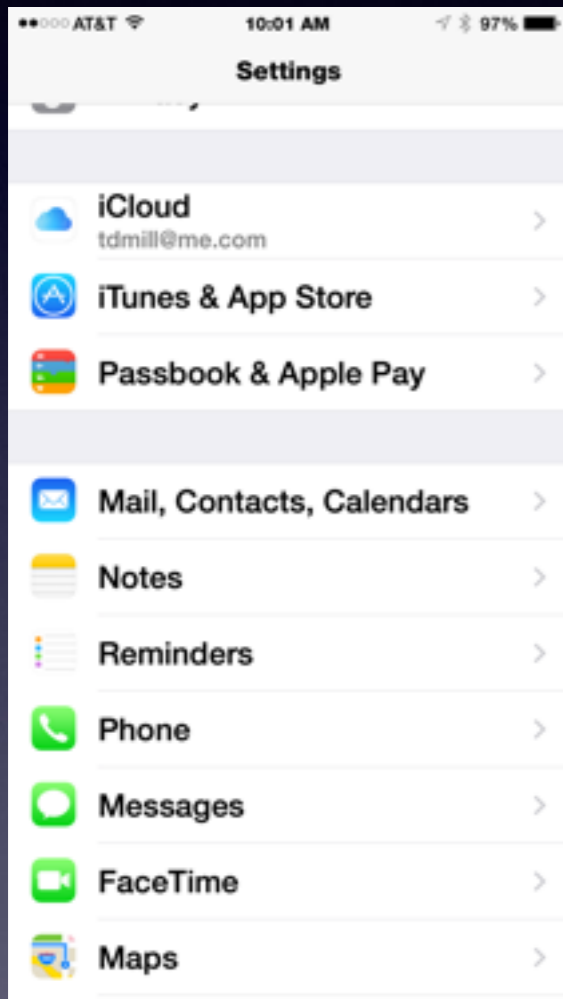

Doctor on Demand is one of a few apps that aim to offer house calls via video chat. The startup, which is backed by infamous TV therapist Phillip McGraw AKA Dr. Phil, offers appointments with state-licensed doctors over video for just $40.

Psychologist appointments are a touch more expensive at $50 for a 25-minute session and $95 for a 50-minute session, but it's still much cheaper than an in-office visit. If you want to meet with a lactation consultant, you'll also pay $40 for a 25-minute session or $70 for 50 minutes.
