*All statistics are estimates and will vary depending on exact file size and/or combination with other files.

Data Breakdown!

Memory Size Fun Facts:

- The entire human genome consists of a mere 0.791175GB of data.
- 1 Terabyte (1,024 Gigabytes) equates to roughly 50,000 trees when used to store electronic documents. So think about it... with a 1GB USB drive you can save roughly 50 trees with a single data-load. And remember: USB flash memory is re-useable. Multiply those 50 trees by the number of times you re-use the drive and you could be saving a forest.
- 1GB holds roughly 230 songs (at 128kbps). That's roughly 16 hours of music or 20 albums.
- The average 2 hour movie is 1.5GB. That's two feature lengh films on a 4GB drive, with memory to spare.
- War and Peace is 1.7MB in digital form. That means you could store over 542 copies on a 1GB drive.
- A 1GB drive can hold an estimated 595 photos (with a 5 megapixel camera at standard resolution settings). The average photo album holds 200 photos. That means you could fit 3 photo albums on just one drive. Create a slideshow, add music and voila!
- Catalogs are costly to produce, hard to ship and can take up valuable desk and storage space. Hand out your catalog on a USB flash drive and you've saved time, labor and the environment. Our catalogs are 5MB. You could preload roughly 180 of them on a 1GB flash drive.
- An average 10 slide PowerPoint presentation is less than 1MB in size (330kb). You could fit over 2,800 PowerPoint files on a 1GB USB drive.
- The average 2 minute video on YouTube is approximately 4MB. With a 1GB flash drive you could hold over 230 of them... that's over 7 hours of video content.
- When used to store 'test-only' electronic documents, a 1GB drive can store 1,000's of files in a single data preload. And remember, USB flash memory is re-useable. Copy, delete and repeat.

Do not install MacKeeper

106812 Views | Last Modified: Dec 2, 2015

Many users will see references to an application called MacKeeper on various web sites and via pop-ups on their browser. Not only is it expensive for what it purports to do (freeware applications that do the same or more are readily available), it can sometimes install itself without the user realising it, and it can be very tricky to get rid of. The only utility you must run on a system is a backup utility, and only backed up systems should be troubleshooted with system management utilities, as you may have a hardware problem causing the other system issues, and the only way to isolate hardware or software issues is on a backed up system, otherwise you may completely make your data inaccessible by accident.

MacKeeper has been described by various sources as highly invasive malware* that can de-stablize your operating system, adding that it is unethically marketed, with a history of making false advertising claims, by a company called Zeobit, and a rip-off.

(Please note that references to the original developers, Zeobit, also now refer to Kromtech Alliance Corp, who acquired MacKeeper and PCKeeper from Zeobit LLC in early 2018.)

Most positive reviews of it have been found to have been paid for by Zeobit (developers of MacKeeper) in the form of 'free upgrades' etc. One such opinion is:
