Update: Apple has confirmed it's slowing down older iPhones for a very specific reason. Aged batteries, low charges and cold weather can shut down your phone, so it's worked out an algorithm to reduce performance to protect the electronic components inside, according to a new statement on TechCrunch.

So, yes, Apple is be slowing down your old iPhone, but the reason isn't as nefarious as it looks on paper. The end result is unchanged. You're more likely to upgrade to an iPhone X or replace the battery, which we're sure Apple loves and your wallet hates.

Create A Medical ID On Your iPhone!

In the event of an accident, it's vital for first responders to be familiar with the patient's medical history so that they can treat them accordingly. This information, however, is not always immediately available on the site of an incident unless you have set up a "Medical ID" on your iPhone.

With "Medical ID," you can allow anyone to read your essential medical details, such as your blood group, allergies and medications — right from the lock-screen without unlocking your phone. It can also include your emergency contacts and their relationship to you.

To set up a Medical ID!

Go to Home Screen Then to the Health App Click your profile on the top right. Then to Medical ID Tap to create a Medical ID if you don't have one. Fill in all pertinent info Add Medical notes. Add family (emergency) contacts Make sure that "Show when locked" is enabled.

Here's how it works

When you make a call with SOS, your iPhone will automatically call the local emergency number for where you are. In some countries and regions, you may need to choose the service that you need. For example, in China mainland you can choose the police, fire or ambulance service.

You can also add emergency contacts. After an emergency call has ended, your iPhone can alert your emergency contacts with a text message, unless you choose to cancel this option. Your iPhone will send your current location, and for a period of time after you've entered SOS mode, your emergency contacts will be sent updates when your location changes.

> When you call using SOS! Here is what will happen:

Make the call on iPhone 7 or earlier:

- emergency services.

After the call has ended, your iPhone will send your emergency contacts a text message with your current location, unless you choose to cancel this option. If Location Services is turned off, it will temporarily be turned on. If your location changes, your contacts will get an update and you'll receive a notification about 10 minutes later.

If you use the Emergency SOS shortcut, you'll need to enter your passcode to re-enable Touch ID, even if you don't complete a call to the emergency services.

1. Press and hold the side button and one of the volume buttons until the Emergency SOS slider appears.

2. Drag the Emergency SOS slider to call the emergency services. If you continue to hold down the side button and volume button, instead of dragging the slider, a countdown will start and an alert will sound. If you hold down the buttons until the countdown has finished, your iPhone will automatically call the emergency services.

1. Rapidly press the side (or top) button five times. The Emergency SOS slider will appear. (In India, you only need to press the button three times, then your iPhone will automatically call the emergency services.)

2. Drag the Emergency SOS slider to call the
